Shaolin Jie Dao. Traditionally used by Shaolin monks not as a weapon (which is forbidden) but for domestic purposes, including shaving. When traveling on foot, the Jie Dao may be used to clear a path in the forest or to gather firewood. The "Jie" in Jie Dao means "abstain", and Jie Dao translates as "the sword of abstention from killing". This explains the deliberate lack of a sharp point and ascribes spiritual as well as functional value. The best known legend involving the Jie Dao tells of Huike, the successor to Bhodidharma, who cut off his left arm with a Jie Dao in order to demonstrate his sincerity to Dharma. Features blunt-ended high carbon steel forged blades, bamboo handle with twine wrap and bamboo scabbard with traditional steel fittings.

Tamahagane steel is made by building and firing a Tataru, the traditional Japanese sword-steel smelter. This charcoal-fired furnace produces a very pure steel from iron sand, and this steel "Kera" or bloom can be broken and separated into high- and low-carbon pieces, which respectively form the "skin" steel and "core" steel of the blade. The skin steel is forged and folded repeatedly, to remove slag inclusions and voids and is then wrapped around the core steel before the resulting billet is forged into a blade. Careful heat treating, shaping and polishing reveals the tight "Hada" or layer pattern of the blade and the white particles of the "Hamon" or temper line. While this process results in the aesthetic qualities much admired by collectors it also produces a very functional blade, as the high carbon content of the skin steel makes a very hard edge possible while the softer core steel gives the blade its resilience and ability to absorb shock.

Designed by world-renowned Chinese martial arts master Sifu Adam Hsu, these Chinese straight swords (Jian) are becoming the weapon of choice in the Tai Chi community. Functionality, weight and balance are paramount considerations in Sifu Hsu's designs, while Hanwei's quality and workmanship give the swords a graceful and pleasing appearance. The blades are crafted in high-carbon spring steel and have a pronounced center ridge and distal taper, producing exactly the right degree of stiffness and a very audible hiss in the cutting stroke. The Ming-style steel guards have an embossed Dragon symbol, while the open-ended pommels facilitate the fitting of a tassel. The Jians are available with the grips and scabbards made from either fiberglass (Single-hand PC2269A,B,C and D, Double-hand PC2278) for extreme durability or exotic wood (PC2313A,B,C and D) for the traditionalist. A unique feature is the "duck-bill lock" in the bottom of the scabbard that securely holds the sword in place.

DXOD715 The Spanish Dollar.

Also known as the pieces of eight, the real de a ocho or the eight-real coin is a silver coin, worth eight reales, that was minted in the Spanish Empire after a Spanish currency reform in 1497. Long tied to the lore of piracy, "pieces of eight" were manufactured in the Americas and transported in bulk back to Spain (to pay for wars and various other things), making them a very tempting target for seagoing pirates. Some pirates were among the richest people in the world. Because the pieces of eight were widely used in Europe, the Americas, and the Far East, it became the first world currency by the late 18th century. Many existing currencies, such as the Canadian dollar, United States dollar, and the Chinese Yuan, as well as currencies in Latin America and the Philippine peso, were initially based on the Spanish dollar and other 8-reales coins. Comes in leather pouch with tie.

BY15P ByrdRench. 4 5/8" closed. Matte finish 8Cr13MoV stainless construction. Features locking 2 1/4" leaf-shaped blade with thumb slot. The body is made of two halves connecting via a pivot, with a slip joint plier (large and small bite) on one end, and an adjustable 9/16" wrench on the opposite end. The pivot rotates, locking both halves into a full-length tool with length enough to torque comfortably. Extended, the wrench occupies one end, with the opposite end holding a magnetized screwdriver and four screwdriver bits; #2 and #3 Phillips-head and #1 and #2 flat-head stored in the handle (bits can be replaced/customized with any standard bit including Allen and Torx®). A rough file/hole starter anchors inside a spring on top of the bits, holding them in the handle. Releasing the pivot closes the tool or separates the two halves entirely to use the wrench and screwdriver or knife independently or simultaneously. Molded heavy black nylon belt sheath.....Retail $109.95
